Lauren Paradise is the Governance Administrator for Quantum Governance, L3C. She graduated from Brown University in May of 2023 with a B.A. in Anthropology on the anthropological archaeology track and a Certificate in Data Fluency. The data science supplement to her humanities degree allowed Paradise to develop exceptional writing skills and synthesis of materials while simultaneously gaining data literacy and proficiency with data visualization software and popular coding languages like Python. Paradise is also certified biliterate in Spanish and English.

While studying at Brown, Paradise completed an apprenticeship with distinguished professor Lina Fruzzetti and was in charge of the archival process of Fruzzetti's anthropological and documentary film work at the Smithsonian Institution. She also worked closely with Brown's Dean of the College Office as an academic and college life advisor to freshman students. Paradise currently volunteers her time teaching martial arts classes to children in the Providence, Rhode Island area, as she has a Black Belt in both Taekwondo and Shotokan Karate and is a collegiate national champion in Taekwondo.
